

I am interested in serving on the Jackson County Sports Complex Authority because I believe our community is approaching a pivotal moment. The decisions by the Kansas City Royals and Kansas City Chiefs to pursue new homes reflect their respective long-term visions, and I respect those decisions. At the same time, their departures will leave Jackson County with an extraordinary responsibility: determining the future of two major public assets that have served our community for decades.

Rather than viewing this as simply the end of an era, I see it as an opportunity to think boldly and responsibly about what comes next. The Truman Sports Complex represents a significant public investment, and the decisions surrounding its future should be guided by thoughtful planning, fiscal discipline, and a commitment to creating lasting value for Jackson County residents. I would welcome the opportunity to be part of those conversations and help ensure that any path forward reflects both sound stewardship of taxpayer resources and a vision for long-term community benefit.

Throughout my career, I have believed that the best public decisions balance financial responsibility with strategic opportunity. I am fiscally conservative, but I also recognize that smart investments can generate economic activity, strengthen neighborhoods, and improve quality of life when they are carefully planned and well executed. I would bring a collaborative, analytical approach to the Authority's work—listening carefully, evaluating options objectively, and always keeping the interests of Jackson County residents at the center of every decision.

Kansas City has never been defined by its challenges, but by its ability to reinvent itself. I believe the future of the Sports Complex should be approached with that same spirit. As a lifelong champion of this region and a proud Jackson County resident, I would be honored to contribute my time, judgment, and experience to help shape the next chapter of one of our community's most important public assets.
