| Program Description : Through funding provided in an amendment to the Juvenile Court Diversion Contract, the 16th Judicial Circuit of Missouri provides individual and family counseling to youth referred to the court and diverted from prosecution as well as youth adjudicated and placed on formal supervision. We continued our collaboration with the following community organizations: AdHoc Group Against Crime; MOCSA; Truman Medical Center Behavioral Health; and Cornerstones of Care. These organizations offer a variety of services that benefit families. However, these existing programs do not reach all of our families or meet their specific needs for services. We proposed in this grant year to increase our provision of mental health services to youth by offering individual and family therapy provided by contract therapists. We referred and connected youth to mental health services in their communities that are sustainable following court involvement. Contract services for individual sessions allowed us to address acute needs and bridge the gap to these community-based services. We proposed serving 50-70 youth in this grant year. During the last grant year, we signed contracts with six therapists. In order to meet the complex treatment needs of our youth and families, we have identified providers that possess diversity in a broad range of clinical skills and areas of expertise, as well as racial and cultural diversity and gender. At this time, we are working with three women and three men; four of these counselors are African American and two are Caucasian. Additionally, we have contracted with Midtown Psychological Services, Inc., to provide psychological evaluations for assessment, treatment, and placement recommendations. |
| Theoretical or Practical Basis: According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), mental disorders among children are described as “serious changes in the way children typically learn, behave, or handle their emotions, causing distress and problems getting through the day.”<sup>1</sup> Attention Deficit Disorder with Hyperactivity (ADHD), anxiety and depression are the most commonly diagnosed disorders in children. Depression and anxiety have increased over time<sup>2</sup>. Mental health services are critical in addressing the needs of system-involved youth and families. A large study involving more than 70,000 youth from 283 programs across the nation indicated as many as 70% of youth involved in juvenile justice present with mental health challenges that rise to the level of diagnosis<sup>3</sup>. The social isolation and loss of structured activities and disrupted transitions during the global pandemic COVID-19 are exacerbating the challenges of mental health for youth<sup>4</sup>. Community mental health resources are sorely lacking for many segments of the population in Jackson County. Over the years, the number of adults in Missouri suffering from a mental illness has increased, according to Missouri’s Division of Behavioral Health. In 2016, 862,000 Missourians struggled with a mental illness. Three years later, in 2019, that number was up to 925,000 and in 2020, it increased again to 1,056,000. According to the department, mental illness is higher among young adults.<sup>5</sup>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |

Even when counseling resources are available, families often struggle to follow-through with services. Families often face barriers in their efforts to access treatment services. In addition to overburdened providers, families face lack of transportation or on-line connectivity, limited financial resources for co-pay obligations and stigma associated with diagnoses and need for treatment services.

In order to meet this critical need in Jackson County, we requested funds in this grant to engage and directly pay providers. This plan streamlines access to care for youth and families referred to the Family Court.

Expected Impact:

We will provide an individual or family counselor to every youth on formal supervision and youth involved in the Emerging Adult Justice program that needs therapy. We anticipate that this will lead to increased adjustment and attainment of goals as youth move through the system. This will support our efforts to maintain low recidivism and increase the number of youth re-engaging in prosocial, educational and vocational activities.

Evaluation Plan and/or Demonstrated Efficacy: All three programs will be evaluated on an ongoing basis by the Jackson County Court's Research and Development Department.
